The Journal of the Titan Society
(Issue #4, June 1986)

Bditorial

Ronald K. Hoeflin P. O. Box 7430 New York, NY 10116 (212) 582-2326

I have changed the title of this journal again, as you can see, this time from Titanic to Insight, which I believe will be somewhat more dignified and appropriate.

One person has qualified for membership and agreed to join in the past month: Ron Lee. His name and address are included in the accompanying membership list.

I have dropped Peter Pomfrit from the membership list because he evidently collaborated with someone on my recent Trial Test "A", which implies that he probably collaborated with someone on the Mega Test. I will reinstate him as a member only if my suspicions prove to be unfounded.

I am sending this issue to the nine qualified non-members as well as the nine members and two subscribers because it contains a questionnaire that you may like to fill out, even if you do not consider yourself a member of this group. This questionnaire is being distributed by most of the high-IQ societies, but the questionnaire designers are particularly interested in responses from the most highly gifted people, regardless of whether they are members of any high-IQ societies.

Chris Cole has suggested that we try to hold annual meetings for members of the Titan Society. He believes he might be able to persuade some of his friends who have been awarded the Nobel or MacArthur prize to attend such a meeting, perhaps even to join our organization, provided enough members were willing and able to participate in annual meetings. Since four of our members reside in Southern California, I presume that that would be the appropriate place for such a meeting, at least initially. If you would be interested, I urge you to write to Chris Cole.

I will enclose a copy of the June issue of Vidya, a journal I edit for the Triple Nine Society. The Triple Nine Society is open to those who score above the 99.9 percentile. It currently has 681 members and 20 non-member subscribers, including 609 U.S. members, 39 Canadian, and 33 overseas. Annual dues are just $15.00.

Autobiography and Problem Corrections

Short Autobiography

While I hardly remember back beyond last year, I have the image of myself as a normal athletic young boy without any hint of an intellectual gift. I remember playing with my friends, collecting butterflies, going on family vacations. I received mixed grades throughout grade school and felt I would someday become a scientist or engineer like my father. However, this image must be inaccurate, because I arrived at high school with what one friend termed an "inimitable self-confidence". I must admit to an attitude of superiority the origins of which are lost in my memories. Isolated incidents also call into doubt my image of myself as a "normal" boy: I remember discovering the Pythagorean theorem, lecturing about dinosaurs to a sixth grade class while I was in first grade, proving a previously "unsolved" algebraic identity. At any rate, I graduated from high school with perfect grades and test scores, and won most of the statewide competitions during my senior year.

I went on to Harvard, graduating in four years with combined Bachelor's and Master's degrees in Physics. I also won the University Prize in Philosophy. I then went to Caltech to study theoretical physics. After a couple of years, I tired of academics, co-founded two companies, and am currently the president of one of them. The company specializes in fourth generation computer systems (the other company specializes in fifth generations systems). I married my college sweetheart, and we live a "normal" life working and traveling for our vacations. I have very little free time, or at least I like to say that. The truth is I am selfish with my time.

My favorite quotations are: "Scientists are so good nowadays at discovering truth that it is trivial to condone their methods and absurd to criticize them" (Quine); "Philosophy is a battle against the bewitchment of our intelligence by means of language" (Wittgenstein); "There is no good reason to believe in God" (Moore); "The less government we have, the better" (Emerson).

Corrections to Logic Problems from Issue #2

Correction to "Labeled Boxes": The sign on box A should read: "The sign on box B is true and the gold is in box A".

Correction to "N-Person Fair Division": The word "insure" should be replaced with the word "ensure" in two places.

Please send solutions to the above address and I will summarize in a future issue.

Preliminary Report on Trial Test "A"

Ronald K. Hoeflin P. O. Box 7430 New York, NY 10116

The graph below shows the distribution of scores on Trial Test "A" for 35 Triple Nine participants, counting verbal scores one point apiece and non-verbal scores two points apiece. I have not counted problems 33 and 35 because I am not confident that I know the solutions yet, so the maximum possible score was 44 rather than 48. I have omitted the scores of two Titan members and one Triple Nine member because one Titan and one Triple Nine member appear to have collaborated and because another Titan member attempted only the verbal problems. The median score was 24 correct, which probably corresponds to the 99.9 percentile. The lowest score was 4 and the highest was 42.

$\underline{\mathbf{A}}$ Note on $\underline{\mathbf{P}} = \underline{\mathbf{NP}}$

Professor Joseph O'Rourke Dept. of Electrical Engineering & Computer Science Johns Hopkins University Baltimore, ND 21218

Re Eric Hart and P =? NP. You may be interested to know that this spring a mathematician named E. R. Swart circulated a manuscript claiming to establish that P = NP. It created quite a stir in the computer science community, as it is widely suspected that $P \neq NP$. Everyone around the world started to scrutinize his logic, and eventually Robert Solovay, a famous mathematician at Berkeley, found some gaps in his proof, and the question remains open.

The Soapbox Survey (approx. time one hour)

G M IN T IS O

THS SURVEY is probably the most unusual – and enjoyable – you've ever seen. It covers not just a few overworked political issues, but a whole range of topics, from ethics to entertainment, from personality to predictions of the future! Your answers here will not only provide vital information for an international research project, but should really stimulate your thinking.

You remain anonymous, but your opinions will help provide a valuable picture of the attitudes and perceptions that build our society. When the results have been compiled, we'll publish a report here — and we think that many of those results will be quite surprising! So relax, remember that no one is "judging" you, and enjoy taking this unique survey!

Try to answer all items, using some "very strong" responses, and without overusing the "U." If in doubt about a word or concept, take the most usual or normal meaning. Answer each item in the brackets provided, according to the following (YYY -NNN) scale, unless instructed otherwise.

SCALE

YYY - Very strong 'Yes"

YY - Fairly strong "Yes"

Y - Milo Yes"

U - Undecided, don't know

N - Mild "No"

NN - Fairly strong "No"

NNN - Very strong "No"
